1. FIGHTING GENDER STEREOTYPES

Gender stereotyping is harmful to everyone, but is especially harmful towards transgender people who blur the lines of what society defines as gender.

Defining ourselves, our roles in life, and how we express our gender is a universal human right.

2. BODILY AUTONOMY

Access to medically necessary care and a right to choose what we do with our bodies are fundamental issues for both feminists and transgender people. Transgender people often struggle to get access to life saving surgeries and medications.

3. OPPOSING PATRIARCHY

Transgender people represent an imminent threat to many of the patriarchal power structures and arguments that support them. We blur the lines of what gender supposedly means. We dismantle conventional definitions of sexual orientation and sexuality.

Only through truly intersectional and trans inclusive feminism can we succeed in dismantling the patriarchy. You cannot oppose the overarching systems of oppressions while giving a free pass to perpetuate itself against one disadvantaged class.
